It's a fact: there are still just a few men working in the field of childhood. Among the professionals undertaking training in this sector for example in Western Switzerland, about 6% of them are men. There is a need to open this field for men and rethink the distribution between women and men in these occupations. This remains a major challenge to build a society that considers a more equitable share of the education of girls and boys. Which parent does not dream of being able to fly? This can happen... From time to time play with your child in a group so you can see what your child is experiencing in nursery. That possibility exists! In a 'parent nursery' fathers and mothers work together. Occasionally they get a day or half a day in the nursery. They play there with their child and the other children. They eat there, sing with the children, read books for them, do fingerpainting or build a tower of blocks. Brief description						Organization
Kosovo (under UNSCR 1244) has developed an integrated approach to early childhood education, combining the processes of upbringing, health-care, education, play and professional care in children's development. This comprehensive approach to early education has taken quite an important place in the five-year strategic plan 2011-2016, in which the Ministry of Education clear goals and expectations to enhance and further develop the integral components of this education. Ensuring that all children are provided with equal access to services, encouragement and promotion of alternative forms of preschool education, a focus on growth and controlling the quality of educational work with children, and awareness raising of parents as well as the national awareness of the significance of greater investment in early childhood, occupies an important place in this strategic plan. Brief description						Organization
Parents and professionals as partners managing diversity in early childhood education. This report shows that partnerships between parents and professionals for improved childcare do not come about automatically. The Dutch project Parents and Diversity has developed new approaches and methods for giving concrete form to such partnerships in day-to-day contacts and by respecting the diversity among parents such that all types of parents know they are welcome and have a voice. The subject is now being discussed at national and European symposia with resolutions being made and laid down in the policies and plans of childcare organisations. The project has also informed discussions about the future training curricula for educators. 24	ECD-QUAT: Quality Assessment Tool of ECD Services for Young Boys and Girls	Rona Jualla van Oudenhoven and Nico van Oudenhoven	English	The Netherlands	internationally	ICDI	2012	15
Brief description						Organization
Early Childhood Development (ECD) provisions and services for young boys and girls are precious and precarious spaces as it is there that society's most vulnerable young people live and look to the future. The quality of their surroundings - physical, psychological and spiritual- determines to a large degree how these young children relate to the world. There are no accessible and easy to use tools to assess the quality of these spaces. Those that are available are cumbersome, usually look at a limited number of dimensions, and don't easily lend themselves to useful comparisons. The Quality Assessment Tool (ECD-QUAT) offers a possible solution to this end.						ICDI Address: Hooglandse Kerkgracht 17F 2312HS Leiden, The Netherlands Phone number: +31 71 5127420

Brief description						Organization
Parents, communities and governments around the world are recognizing children's rights to protection from physical punishment and to discipline that respects their dignity. Increasingly, parents are being advised to use "positive discipline". But what is positive discipline and how does one do it? This book provides concrete answers, setting out 4 clear principles. Parents will learn how to: 1) set goals, 2) create a positive home climate, 3) understand how children think and feel, and 4) problem solve in challenging situations. They will practise their skills in hands-on exercises and learn how to apply the same principles across a wide range of situations. This book is aimed at parents of children of all ages. It also can be used by family support workers, parent educators and other professionals who work with parents and children.

Today ECD is increasingly recognized as one of the most important investments that countries and families can make to prosper and help all children lead productive lives. This document provides a simple guide for policy makers and practitioners about how to invest in young children. It identifies 25 essential ECD interventions that can be delivered through five integrated packages at different stages in a child's life, spanning the education, health, nutrition, water, sanitation and social protection sectors. The document also lays out four simple principles to design and implement successful ECD strategies: (i) prepare an ECD diagnostic and strategy; (ii) implement widely through coordination; (iii) create synergies and cost savings through integrated interventions; and (iv) monitor, evaluate, and scale up successful interventions.						The World Bank Address: 1818 H Street, NW Washington, DC 20433 USA Phone number: (202) 473-1000

The division of labour between fathers and mothers has evolved in the last decades. We can convert it to an adapted practice in childcare. This brochure wants to enthuse the childcare participants to fatherly involvement. It explains why it is useful that parental participation actively aims at fathers. At the same time the brochure offers a practical tool, with which childcare centres get a realistic picture of parental involvement through concise self-evaluation. The father's place in this context is given a great chance. This tool was developed within the European Equal Project Ecce Ama.
